The shame of the internet is websites move pages around or take them down. Its called link rot when all your links stop working them because some webmasters changed all the page addresses. These bookmarks go back to the early 2000s. One reason I posted them is to see how many are broken.

I have worked at billion-dollar multinational media companies that changed the structure of the entire website Sunday, and were genuinely surprised when their web traffic went to zero on Monday. I guess they never bothered to learn how the darn internet worked.
